Ms. Cristina Rodríguez
Former Co-Chair, Commission on the Supreme Court of the United States
Yale Law School
127 Wall Street
New Haven, CT 06511

Dear Ms. Rodríguez:

The Committee on the Judiciary is conducting oversight of radical efforts to pack the Supreme Court and undermine judicial independence. On April 16, 2021, we wrote to you in your position as co-chair of President Biden’s Commission on the Supreme Court of the United States asking that you retain documents and communications related to the efforts of the Commission on the Supreme Court of the United States. To date, we have not received acknowledgment that you have taken any steps in response to our letter. Accordingly, as we begin the 118th Congress, we write to you again to ask that you produce material related to the Commission’s work.

Responding to progressive calls to pack the Court, President Biden created the Commission to provide “an analysis of the principal arguments in the contemporary public debate for and against Supreme Court reform” and to explore various topics, including the “membership and size of the Court.”¹ In December 2021, the Commission issued its nearly 300-page final report to President Biden.² While the Commission’s final report to President Biden avoided a full-throated embrace of “packing” the Court, some Commission Members, such as Professor Caroline Frederickson, continued to publicly advocate for packing the Court.³

The Commission’s work and ultimate report occurred during unprecedented and unrelenting attacks on the Court and its independence. For example, in 2019, Senate Democrats threatened the Supreme Court in an amicus brief to decide a case in the manner they preferred or be “restructured.”⁴ In March 2020, the Senate Democratic Leader even went to the steps of the Court and threatened specific justices by name: “I want to tell you, Gorsuch; I want to tell you, Kavanaugh: You have released the whirlwind, and you will pay the price. You won't know what hit you if you go forward with these awful decisions.”⁵

Direct attacks on the Court only intensified following the unprecedented leak of the draft opinion in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization in May 2022. For example, left-wing groups engaged in harassment and intimidation campaigns outside Justices' homes,⁶ and some offered bounties for the “location of the six Supreme Court Justices who voted [in June] to overturn Roe v. Wade” following the issuance of the Dobbs opinion.⁷ In June 2022, a man showed up to Justice Kavanaugh's home with a handgun, a tactical knife, pepper spray, zip ties, a hammer, and other gear to “remove some people from the Supreme Court” in order to “stop Roe v. Wade from being overturned.”⁸ The man allegedly hoped to assassinate as many as three justices because, in the man's own words, if “there are more liberal than conservative judges, they will have the power.”⁹

While the Commission's work has concluded, questions remain about the Commission's work, deliberations, and true purpose. As such, we request that you produce the following material, which we asked you to preserve in April 2021:

1. All documents and communications between or among you and any Commission members or employees;
2. All documents and communications between or among you and any academic colleagues and research assistants referring or relating to the Commission on the Supreme Court of the United States;
