Dear Mr. Ting:

The Committee on House Administration, the Committee on the Judiciary, and the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform are charged with upholding fundamental American civil liberties and protecting the integrity of American elections. In light of allegations that online fundraising platforms that serve as conduits for political donations have accepted fraudulent donations from domestic and foreign sources,<sup>1</sup> the Committees are conducting oversight to inform potential legislative reforms.<sup>2</sup> To further our oversight and legislative reforms, on July 18, 2025, the Committees requested your appearance at a transcribed interview.<sup>3</sup> To date, you have failed to comply with the Committees' request. Therefore, the Judiciary Committee must resort to compulsory process to obtain your testimony.

On July 18, 2025, the Committees requested your appearance at a voluntary transcribed interview.<sup>4</sup> That day, you acknowledged the request and informed the Committees that you were being represented by Danny Onorato.<sup>5</sup> On August 1, Mr. Onorato informed the Committees that you would not appear for a transcribed interview in a timely fashion and requested that the Committees “withdraw [our] requests for a transcribed interview until” a reported “Department of Justice investigation” into online political fundraising conduits “is finished.”<sup>6</sup> Mr. Onorato also stated that “prior to scheduling any transcribed interview, the Committees must first identify issues to be discussed with Mr. Ting and confer with counsel for ActBlue” to alleviate attorney-client privilege concerns.<sup>7</sup> On June 9, counsel for ActBlue separately wrote to the Committees, raising additional objections.<sup>8</sup>

I. The stated reasons for noncompliance with our request are unpersuasive and have no basis in law.

Congress has a “broad and indispensable” power to conduct oversight, which “encompasses inquiries into the administration of existing laws, studies of proposed laws, and surveys of defects in our social, economic or political system for the purpose of enabling the Congress to remedy them.”<sup>9</sup> The Supreme Court has recognized that Congress’s oversight authority is not restricted by ongoing civil and criminal investigations.

In Sinclair v. United States, the Court noted that the pendency of litigation does not stop Congress’s ability to investigate.<sup>10</sup> In that case, the Court held that Congress’s authority “directly or through its committees, to require pertinent disclosures in aid of its own constitutional power is not abridged because the information sought to be elicited may also be of use in” civil or criminal suits.<sup>11</sup> Similarly, in Hutcheson v. United States, the Court explained that “a congressional committee . . . engaged in a legitimate legislative investigation need not grind to a halt whenever responses to its inquiries might potentially be harmful to a witness in some distinct proceeding . . . or when crime or wrongdoing is exposed.”<sup>12</sup> The historical record bears this point out—many congressional investigations have occurred in parallel to executive branch

Mr. Onorato also indirectly accused the Committees of having an improper motive of collaborating with DOJ in its reported parallel investigation of ActBlue. As described further below, this allegation is unfounded and based on a distortion of the Committees’ May 7 letter to Attorney General Pamela Bondi. See Letter from Rep. Bryan Steil, Chairman, Comm. on H. Admin., Rep. Jim Jordan, Chairman, H. Comm. on the Judiciary, & Rep. James Comer, Chairman, H. Comm. on Oversight and Gov’t Reform, to Hon. Pamela J. investigations of the same or related matters.<sup>13</sup>

Mr. Onorato's request that the Committees "withdraw [our] requests for a transcribed interview until" the reported "Department of Justice investigation is finished" amounts to a demand that the Committees forgo testimony that is potentially critical to our legislative oversight.<sup>14</sup> Congress may set the terms of its own oversight, compelling testimony in a time, place, and manner of its own choosing.<sup>15</sup> Federal courts have consistently held that witnesses may not "impose [their] own conditions upon the manner of [congressional] inquiry."<sup>16</sup> That is because "a witness does not have the legal right to dictate the conditions under which he will or will not testify"<sup>17</sup> or "to prescribe the conditions under which he may be interrogated by Congress."<sup>18</sup>

Mr. Onorato is wrong to claim that "the Committees will not be prejudiced in any way" by his request to delay your testimony "because President Trump directed that the Attorney General report the results of her investigation . . . within 180 days."<sup>19</sup> To start, 180 days, or six months, represents one-quarter of the duration of the 119th Congress. A delay to encompass that period risks preventing the Committees from adequately developing the factual record upon which to consider legislative reforms. Moreover, while the President directed the Attorney General to "report" the results of her investigation within six months, potential proceedings arising from that investigation could carry on much longer.<sup>20</sup>

To the extent you adopt the reasoning in ActBlue's June 9 letter—that the Committees' requests violate the First Amendment and the Constitution’s Equal Protection Clause by allegedly “selective[ly] focus[ing]” on ActBlue<sup>21</sup>—these bases for noncompliance are also unpersuasive. As a foundational matter, as explained above, Congress is free to choose how to conduct oversight, including which entities to examine and in what manner.<sup>22</sup> A Congressional committee’s decision to examine one entity and not another does not violate the Equal Protection Clause, and ActBlue has offered no evidence—because there is none—that the Committees have initiated their oversight on the basis of any “suspect classification.”<sup>23</sup> Similarly, with respect to ActBlue’s First Amendment argument, the Supreme Court has been clear that the First Amendment does not give witnesses an absolute right to refuse to respond to a Congressional inquiry.<sup>24</sup> Where, as here, a Congressional committee has a valid legislative purpose and the appropriate delegation from the legislative body to investigate, the First Amendment does not insulate a witness from cooperating.<sup>25</sup>

The Committees also take issue with Mr. Onorato’s claim that “prior to scheduling any transcribed interview, the Committees must first identify issues to be discussed with [you] and confer with counsel for ActBlue” to alleviate attorney-client privilege concerns.<sup>26</sup> Under the House regulations governing the taking of depositions, you have the right to be accompanied by counsel, and assertions of privilege must be made on a question-by-question basis.<sup>27</sup> Thus, you will have adequate opportunity to consult your attorney for the purpose of asserting privilege during your deposition.

Comm. on Oversight and Gov’t Reform, & Rep. Bryan Steil, Chairman, Comm. on H. Admin. (June 9, 2025). In addition, ActBlue’s complaint about “selective focus” is fundamentally false. As we have explained, the Committees are conducting oversight of ActBlue due to specific allegations, stemming from both congressional testimony and public reports, about ActBlue’s ability to prevent straw, foreign, and fraudulent donations. See American Confidence in Elections: Prohibiting Foreign Interference: Hearing Before the Comm. on H. Admin., 118th Cong. (Dec. 18, 2024); Hollie McKay, Exclusive: Data shows that half of 2019 donations to ActBlue came from untraceable ‘unemployed’ donors, FOX NEWS (Sept. 12, 2020); Phill Kline, Commentary: ActBlue Raises Millions in Suspicious Gift Card Donations, REALCLEARPOLITICS (Sept. 16, 2020); Steven Kovac, The Most Expensive Judicial Race in US History Is Raising Questions, THE EPOCH TIMES (Oct. 21, 2023). ActBlue’s claim that the Committees should investigate another online fundraising entity because it also faces “public reports about irregularities” is without merit.

II. The Committees' inquiry has a valid and important legislative purpose.

Mr. Onorato's August 1 letter also alleges that the Committees have promised to "work collaboratively with DOJ' in its parallel investigation."<sup>28</sup> That selective quotation distorts the Committees' May 7 letter to Attorney General Bondi. In truth, the Committees pledged to "work collaboratively with DOJ to improve and strengthen the integrity of America's electoral system."<sup>29</sup> That shared policy outcome is not evidence of improper motivation, as Mr. Onorato implies, in the Committee's oversight inquiry.

Likewise, ActBlue's reliance on cherry-picked statements from Chairman Steil without their surrounding context is misleading.<sup>30</sup> ActBlue glaringly omits the remainder of Chairman Steil's statement, in which he stated that a goal of the Committees' oversight is to "put[] in place rules and laws that prevent any abuse in the future."<sup>31</sup> Furthermore, Chairman Steil explicitly acknowledged the differences between the Committee's oversight and the Department's reported investigative activity, explaining that the prosecutorial function is squarely "the domain of the United States Department of Justice."<sup>32</sup> Contrary to ActBlue's claims, the Committees have no "agreement to coordinate the Committees' activities with the Executive Branch," are not conducting this investigation in support of any criminal inquiry, and have not furnished any non-public information to the Department.<sup>33</sup>

The Committees' investigation has a clear—and important—legislative purpose. Congress has a specific interest in ensuring that bad actors, including foreign actors, cannot make fraudulent or illegal political donations through online fundraising platforms. Our oversight to Separately, individual committee members' motives cannot vitiate a legitimate legislative purpose for an investigation. *Cf. Watkins v. date indicates that current law may be insufficient to stop these illicit donations.<sup>34</sup> The Committees are considering a wide array of potential legislative reforms to address these concerns. These may include a requirement that card verification values be collected for online political donations,<sup>35</sup> restrictions on political donations made using gift cards, prepaid cards, or foreign credit cards, and enhanced reporting requirements for online fundraising conduits. Some or all of these requirements could be enforced with criminal penalties.

Such legislation is squarely within the power of Congress and within the jurisdiction of the Committees. Article I of the Constitution states that Congress “may at any time by Law make or alter . . . Regulations” pertaining to federal elections.<sup>36</sup> Under the rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee on House Administration has jurisdiction over “federal elections.”<sup>37</sup> The Committee on the Judiciary has jurisdiction over “criminal law enforcement” and “civil liberties,” including political speech.<sup>38</sup> The Committee on Oversight and Government Reform has jurisdiction to conduct oversight over “any matter” at “any time” to inform legislative reforms by any congressional committee.<sup>39</sup>

Finally, ActBlue’s assertion that the Committees’ release of a staff report “suggests that the investigation has become something other than a legislative fact-gathering effort” lacks merit.<sup>40</sup> Congressional staff reports are a common mechanism by which committees present information to inform legislative reforms. Indeed, the Committees’ staff report specifically notes that the Committees will “continue investigating to inform potential legislative reforms to improve and strengthen our democracy.”<sup>41</sup>

In addition, ActBlue’s claims that the Committees “mischaracterized the contents of the documents” or “distorted a selection of out-of-context communications” are inaccurate. The Committees’ report includes full versions of every document cited in the report in a 458-page appendix. At the request of ActBlue’s former counsel, the Committees redacted certain portions of these documents to protect the identities of ActBlue staff and potentially sensitive information. “provide[d] legal oversight for decisions about fraud” and worked closely with ActBlue’s fraud-prevention team.<sup>42</sup> The Committees have found significant evidence that ActBlue had “a fundamentally unserious approach to fraud prevention” during this period.<sup>43</sup> For example, the Committees discovered that ActBlue weakened its fraud-prevention standards at least twice in 2024 despite knowledge of significant attempted fraud on the platform, including from foreign actors.<sup>44</sup> Similarly, ActBlue’s training guide for new fraud-prevention staff instructed employees to “look for reasons to accept contributions” rather than assess potentially fraudulent donations with a skeptical eye.<sup>45</sup> Other internal ActBlue documents show that top fraud-prevention staff assessed that there were several mechanisms by which bad actors could evade ActBlue’s fraud-prevention systems and make illicit donations.<sup>46</sup> To legislate effectively, the Committees must first gather more information about these and other instances of potentially fraudulent donations being made through online fundraising platforms.
