

Congressional Testimony of Amy Mekelburg, Founder of RAIR Foundation USA

Distinguished Members of Congress:

My name is Amy Mekelburg, Founder of RAIR Foundation USA. I come before you today out of profound love for this country, and at great personal cost. For 15 years, I have documented Islam's assault on Europe and its dangerous advance inside America.

For defending Western values, Islam and its left-wing allies marked my family for destruction. They stalked us, attacked my loved ones' careers, and sent death threats.

Today I travel with armed security.

A simple walk, a grocery run, opening my own front door, none of it is safe anymore. Islam has taken that from me.

The hardest part of this fight has been watching friends pay the ultimate price.

On January 29, 2025, my friend Salwan Momika, an Iraqi Christian who fled to Sweden to escape Islam, was slaughtered as I watched. Sweden put him on trial for "hate speech" for telling the truth about the threat that killed him.

Salwan predicted his own assassination. He knew because the Sharia penalty for criticizing Islam is death.

A 1,400-year-old war is being waged inside our country. Muhammad, the man Muslims call their Prophet, was a military commander whose mission was to bring the world under Islamic rule.

That mission cannot be completed until America falls.

Islam is a hostile totalitarian political ideology using our freedoms to destroy us.

To every non-Muslim, it offers three choices: convert, submit, or die. It does not stop until every court, school, and government on earth is under Sharia.

The Muslim Brotherhood turned this imperative into a modern conquest strategy. Two seized documents, the 1982 Project and the 1991 Explanatory Memorandum, detail their two-front plan: build parallel Islamic societies that reject assimilation, while their faithful capture our institutions.

The Brotherhood wrote the playbook. Today every hostile Islamic regime and faction is executing it on our soil: Saudi Arabia, Iran, Turkey, Qatar, Pakistan, Hamas, and the Taliban.

Different countries. Different sects. Marching in lockstep toward one conquest.

These networks operate more than 8,000 Islamic nonprofits across America, including nearly 650 in Texas alone.

They have built a parallel infrastructure: mosques, seminaries, schools, sharia banks, sharia courts, sharia clinics, charities, media, and political networks. This is a coordinated ideological ecosystem.

Texas and Florida, the Brotherhood's command centers, are the clearest example of the first strategy: massive fortresses where Muslims live cradle to grave under full Sharia.

In Texas, terror-tied imam Yasir Qadhi is fighting to build EPIC City, a 402-acre Sharia compound marketed as the "epicenter of Islam in North America."

In Katy, an $80 million Sharia compound is rising under Brotherhood operative Main Al Qudah, whose family is leading terrorists in Jordan.

Hamed Ghazali, named in the 1991 Memorandum, recruited Americans for Al-Qaeda. Today he writes curriculum for Islamic schoolchildren across North America. Texas taxpayers are about to fund him through school vouchers.

Across America, the Brotherhood is buying churches and converting them to mosques.

A Lubbock school became a Brotherhood mosque in 45 days.

In Dallas, two imams who preach hand amputation, sex with captives, and stoning adulterers are suing to seize a Christian megachurch.

Garland, Texas, hosts the U.S. headquarters of a Pakistani jihadi network that trained hundreds of terrorists, including the recent killer of a West Virginia National Guard member.

In Florida, third-generation Brotherhood leader Magda Elkadi Saleh runs a self-contained Tampa enclave.

A Houston mosque led by an imam appointed by Iran's Supreme Leader received nearly $1 million in tax dollars while children pledged allegiance to Khamenei.

Another Hamas-supporting Texas mega-mosque hosted public school field trips while its imam preached that fathers and brothers should kill adulterous daughters.

Members of Congress, there is a little Muslim American girl right now, born in Texas under our Constitution, with every sacred right our forefathers fought and died to give her. She will never know one of them.

Her own father, imam, and teachers raise her to believe she is worth less than a man, as Islam's texts command.

If she is beaten, it is her fault. If she is raped, no American courthouse will hear her screams.

If she is married off as a child to a pedophile, she will never know it is a crime.

She is shielded from her birthright, raised to hate her country, trained to subvert it. There are many thousands like her, and growing fast.

This war's second strategy captures our institutions and culture from within. Their operatives have penetrated our State Department, courts, and school boards to subvert the Constitution and replace it with Sharia.

Hamas, doing business as CAIR, has trained 50,000 lawyers, journalists, filmmakers, and influencers to embed Islam and rewrite our history. When we object, they scream "Islamophobia." Their super PACs flood our elections; mosques run voter drives.

Beside me is fifteen-year-old Marco Hunter-Lopez. He will tell you how the Muslim Brotherhood's student arm, founded in Texas by Yasir Qadhi's father, is targeting Texas children.

For speaking out, Marco's safety was threatened. Our nation's leaders are failing children.

Members of Congress, the American people are awake. Washington is not.

We must choose:

The Constitution or the Quran. America or the caliphate. Freedom or submission.

There is no middle ground.
